After a consolidation day, the market resumed its correction move with a modest loss on Wednesday with mixed global equities. With the application of support trend line, one can see that Nifty has managed to close above trend line support on the daily chart, But Index closed a day below its strong support of 15250 level which indicates a sideways correction in future. For the near term, we can expect a range bound movement between 15300-15000 level. The daily RSI is 66.92, it’s slipped below 70 from an overbought zone. The RSI and index price relation are neutral and does not show any divergence. As index closed below its strong support 15250 level which indicates now 15250 will be the immediate hurdle for upside. Now support shifted to 15100 level and resistance can come near 15300-15350 zone.
Pattern analysis shows that BANK NIFTY has bounced off from exact 261.8 per cent of the Fibonacci level at 37600 and currently placed near the support zone. The markets are showing all possible sign of exhaustion at the current level. There are some selective PSU banks stock seeing outperformance against the broader market.
For the near term, the zone of 36600-36500 has now become temporary immediate support for the Bank nifty. On the other side, the index has upside resistance near 37300 levels. A cautiously positive approach is advised for the coming weeks.

Donald Trump became the first president in American history to be impeached twice when the House of Representatives voted to charge him with inciting last week's mob attack on the Capitol.

On December 18, 2020, the US House of Representatives voted to impeach President Donald J. Trump, making him the third president since the founding of the United States to face this sanction. The unprecedented second impeachment trial of former President Donald Trump begins in the United States Senate at 1 pm on Tuesday (11.30 pm on February 9 in India). Trump will be represented by his attorneys Bruce L Castor Jr and David Schoen, who filed a 78-page trial brief on Feb 8 saying the impeachment charge is violative of Trump’s right to free speech and due process and is 'constitutionally flawed' on account of the fact that Trump has already left office.
WHAT ARE THE CHARGES AGAINST TRUMP?

Immediately after Trump gave an incendiary speech to his supporters on January 6 asking them to 'fight like hell' so he could keep the White House, a large and violent mob stormed the US Capitol where lawmakers were in the process of confirming Joe Biden as the winner of the November 2020 presidential election. A chaotic scene unfolded at the Capitol as supporters of President Trump swarmed the building to protest the Electoral College vote, forcing a lockdown and various confrontations with police. Five people were killed and hundreds injured, the halls and chambers of the building were vandalized, and members of Congress and Capitol staff cowered for hours in hiding for fear of being attacked or killed. On January 13, the House of Representatives voted 232-197 to approve a single article of impeachment that accused Trump of “inciting violence against the government of the United States” in an attempt to overturn the result of the election. The article of impeachment also asked that he be disqualified from holding any public office again.
President Donald Trump condemned the violent supporters who stormed the US Capitol, saying they do not represent America, as he vowed to ensure a peaceful and smooth transition of power to President-elect Joe Biden.
In a new video message, Trump said that America is, and must always be a nation of law and order. Like all Americans, I am outraged by the violence, lawlessness, and mayhem. I immediately deployed the National Guard and federal law enforcement to secure the building and expel the intruders.

Several White House officials resigned after the pro-Trump mob stormed the US Capitol. Education Secretary Betsy DeVos, Transportation Secretary Elaine Chao, former chief of staff Mick Mulvaney, National Security Council Ryan Tully were among those who resigned.
President Donald Trump issued more than 140 pardons and commutations late Tuesday night and early Wednesday morning, as one of his final acts before he leaves office on Wednesday. The Washington Post reported that Trump and close aides, including his daughter Ivanka and son-in-law Jared Kushner, drew up the list during a Sunday meeting in the Oval Office. The New York Times reported that Ivanka sent the final list to the White House counsel’s office for approval and that the Justice Department’s pardon office, which typically reviews who gets executive clemency grants, was not included in the process.
The impeachment trial of President Donald Trump in the United States Senate will take a dramatic turn on Saturday as the president’s lawyers preview their defence of the president. The Senate trial of former president Donald Trump started on Tuesday with a debate and vote on the constitutionality of his second impeachment trial. House managers and the former president’s lawyers took up to four equally divided hours to make the case for or against the constitutionality of Trump’s second impeachment, followed by a Senate vote that passed in its favour by 56 - 44 votes.

The impeachment managers, led by Rep. Jamie Raskin, D-Md., argued that dismissing this impeachment trial would create a ‘January exception,’ setting the precedent for a lame-duck president to act without consequence in the final weeks of his administration.

ANALYSE NOW
ARE WE WORRIED ABOUT OUR EDUCATION AND UNEMPLOYED YOUTH?
As we all are aware, unemployment is a very serious issue not only in India but in the whole world and also more crucial during the COVID-19 pandemic. There are hundreds and thousands of people who do not have employment or are jobless. Besides, the problem of unemployment are very severe in India because of the growing population the demand for jobs increases. Moreover, if we neglect this problem then soon it will be going to become the reason for the doom of the nation.

Unemployment in India, statistics have traditionally been collected, compiled and disseminated once every five years by the Ministry of Labour and Employment (MLE), primarily from sample studies conducted by the National Sample Survey Office. Also, the Centre for Monitoring Indian Economy Private Limited (CMIE), a non-government private entity, started to survey and publish monthly unemployment data for the first time in Indian history in 2016.
TYPES OF UNEMPLOYMENT

FRICIONAL UNEMPLOYMENT

It is a type of unemployment that arises when workers are searching for new jobs or are transitioning from one job to another. It is part of natural unemployment and hence is present even when the economy is considered at full employment.

CYCICAL UNEMPLOYMENT

It is a type of unemployment that is related to the cyclical trends in the industry or the business cycle. If an economy is doing well, it will be at its lowest and will be the highest if the economic growth starts to falter. If cyclical unemployment is rising, it also means that the economy is showing signs of slowdown which is not good. The lack of demand means that there is not enough consumption. The government would then need to address the issue by various fiscal and monetary policies to support the economy.

STRUCTURAL UNEMPLOYMENT

It is a longer-lasting form of unemployment caused by fundamental shifts in an economy and exacerbated by extraneous factors such as technology, competition, and government policy. Jobs are available, but there is a serious mismatch between what companies need and what workers can offer.

INSTITUTIONAL UNEMPLOYMENT

It is unemployment due to interferences with free-market conditions rather than the voluntary decisions of those unemployed. Such interferences include all attempts to raise wage rates above the flexible rates which are a free market trend to adjust the supply of every type of labour to the demand for it. Such interferences are usually the result of so-called 'pro-labour' legislation, although they may also be the result of custom, union activity, or fear of violence.
REASONS FOR UNEMPLOYMENT

In a country like India, there is much reason for a large section of the population for being unemployed. Some of these factors are:

- Caste System
- Slow Economic Growth
- Increase in Population
- Agriculture is a Seasonal Occupation
- Joint Family System
- Fall of Cottage and Small industries
- Slow Growth of Industrialization
- Fewer Savings and Investment
- Causes of Underemployment
- Defective Planning
- Expansion of Universities
- Inadequate Irrigation Facilities
- Immobility of labour
CONSEQUENCES OF UNEMPLOYMENT

There are many types of unemployment (Rural unemployment; disguised unemployment; seasonal unemployment; urban unemployment; Industrial unemployment; Educated Unemployment) which exist in India and the root cause of problems like poverty in India. Thus the economic consequences of unemployment are:-

- Non-utilization of manpower; human resources are not fully utilized. It is sheer wastage for society.
- Loss of output in the economy because unemployed persons only live as consumers, not as producers.
- Thus living only as a consumer will add up the consumption, not the production. They don’t earn nor do they save for investment; thus capital formation is low.
- Due to disguised unemployment, there is a low level of productivity which implies lesser surplus from the output for the future generation.
Thus, these consequences lead to not only a low level of present output but also a low level of future output because of lesser surplus for future investment. The social consequences of unemployment are:

- Unemployment leads to a low quality of life which leads to the state of perpetual suffering.
- Higher the degree of unemployment; higher will be the inequality in the distribution of income and wealth.
- Unemployment divides the Soviets into having or have not. Accordingly, a class conflict that compounds the problem of social unrest.
- Unemployment leads to the vicious circle in society by causing problems like illiteracy; poverty; etc.

So, social consequences of unemployment are that it is a social menace as it denies social justice and enhances social unrest by increasing the disparity between having and haven’t. Thus unemployment affects a lot to the economically and socially and still is a reason for concern for our leaders to how to get rid of this problem.
• IRDP (Integrated Rural Development Programme)
• DPAP (Drought Prone Area Programme)
• Jawahar Rozgar Yojana
• Employment Assurance Scheme
• NRY (Nehru Rozgar Yojana)
• Training for self-Employment
• PMIUPEP (Prime Minister’s Integrated Urban Poverty Eradication Program)
• Employment exchange
• Employment Guarantee Scheme
• Development of the organized sector
• Small and cottage industries
• Employment in forging countries
• Jawahar Gram Samridhi Yojana and few more.
These are the schemes started by the government over the last few years. But due to pandemic India’s institutional focus on its youth has always been relatively weak. According to data, Union budgets of the last five years shows that India spends less than 4 per cent of its annual budget on youth-focused schemes, and the proportion of funding allocated to these schemes has declined in recent years. Besides, the government also makes some rules flexible, so that employment can be created in the private sector also.

We can say that the problem of unemployment in India has reached a critical stage. But, now the government and local authorities have taken the problem seriously and provide internship and on-site vocational training to unemployed youth in incentivizing companies and industrial units. This experience can be combined with distance education to teach the trainees relevant theories and concepts. In the interim, the government should fill a large number of vacant posts. There are more than 22 lakh vacancies in government departments, as per current record. The country can ill-afford this neglect at a time when the unemployment rates remain very high.
